The petroglyphs of Saymalitosh indicate that in the end of the III millennium BC there was a “dehkan calendar”, which was highly developed in the Fergana valley in the first half of the II millennium, based on the cultivated irrigated agriculture and solar movement. This region served as a sacred place for conducting a number of agrarian rituals, sacrificial rituals, and keeping track of the time for the rich harvest of the Fergana peasantry. Therefore, before the festivities of the festoon and the early spring sowing of seeds for the first time, the peasants came to Saymalitosh and conducted rituals carrying the idea of blessing. The rock paintings, similar to the “riding” described above, were painted at such ceremonies. According to this, holiday of Navruz is appeared three or four thousand years ago on the basis of the spring traditions of our ancestors related to the culture of the cultivation of the land lived at the end of the II century BC and beginning of the I century BC.
